Happy Holidays & Happy New Year!!!

THE RADIOLOGIST'S VIEW

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS

At the beginning of each new year most of us go through the process of establishing resolutions. With anticipatory excitement, we create a wish list that includes things we want to do but are not obligated to complete. The common list includes losing weight, exercise more and spend more time with family. In general, the goal is to improve one's life, both personal and professional. As a clinician, you likely have resolutions for your office, many of which are oriented toward increasing income. In regard to New Year's Day resolutions in your professional life, one should consider ways in which to improve the use of diagnostic imaging services in your office. Here are some suggestions:

UPGRADE YOUR EQUIPMENT - There are many practitioners who have had the same equipment and have utilized radiology in the same manner for the past 20 to 30 years. I still read x-ray films that use individual lead letters and numbers to identify the patient's name and date of films. (Many of you are not even familiar with that form of film identification.) If your film cassette screens create artifacts or your film processor sounds like an infant's squeaky toy or the Smithsonian has asked to exhibit your equipment, it is likely a good time to upgrade. If you do, it needs to be digital and it needs to be good quality. Prepare for sticker shock.

QUALITY ASSURANCE – As physicians, we have a duty to do what is best for the patient. In regards to diagnostic imaging, it is important to develop a specific and comprehensive protocol for your imaging services. This begins with the decision to use some form of diagnostic imaging and ends with the final product...the actual image. Review all the steps that are required to accomplish this and determine where changes can be made to minimize patient exposure and improve image quality.

IMAGE QUALITY – Are you satisfied with the quality of your images? Poor quality images reflect on both you as a practitioner and on the entire profession. Make it a goal to improve your image quality with the equipment that you have. There are often simple fixes to the common errors that are seen in image production. If necessary, review your factor chart (if you still use one). Equipment needs to be calibrated, screens and processors need to be cleaned regularly and darkrooms need to be dark. If you have digital equipment, be sure the software is up to date and any required maintenance is performed.

Collimate, collimate, collimate. This improves image quality and can reduce patient dosage.

EDUCATION – The most important function of the practitioner regarding diagnostic imaging is to determine when imaging is indicated and which is the appropriate modality to order. Don't practice by habit. Each case is different and therefore the requirements for imaging are different. Learn the advantages and disadvantages for each modality so that you feel more confident in your orders. Know when to use contrast MRI and understand why CT may be a better choice in some cases. Develop a clear rationale for ordering flexion and extension x-ray or MRI images. Understand the value of images that you do not regularly perform, such as chest films. Learn to navigate the various image viewers that are contained on CDs produced by imaging centers. Review basic terminology that may be contained in an image report. Review State rules and regulations that relate to the use of ionizing radiation and be certain you are in compliance.

IMAGING CENTERS – It seems that there is an increasing number of physicians that are opting out of the responsibilities of owning their x-ray equipment and are choosing to send patients to a local diagnostic imaging center. Choose the center wisely. Make it a goal to visit a center, introduce yourself and learn about the equipment that they have. Be sure that the center knows your needs, who you are, what you do, what your profession is about and that it has radiologists with which you are comfortable in consulting.

I would imagine that creating New Year's Day resolutions, in regards to diagnostic imaging, is not a top priority. But one of mine is to continue to help and encourage the clinicians in our profession to do that which is best for the patient when it comes to ionizing radiation and other forms of diagnostic imaging.
